Returned The Briefcase, Minus Money

Paris, Sept. 4. Police were today seeking an unidentified woman, believed to be British, who hired a Paris taxi last week a few minutes after a French businessman left a briefcase with 978,000 francs (about £978) on the back seat.

The woman, speaking with a strong English accent, handed the briefcase to the taxidriver as she got out at St Lazare railway station, terminus for Cross-Channel services.

When the owner, M. Michel Lorthois, collected the briefcase from the police he discovered that the money and a bundle of business correspondence were missing.

The taxidriver said the woman was about 50 and wore a pleated blue skirt and black blouse.—China Mail 'Special.

SHAWCROSS REPRESENTS FIGHT BORDER

Geneva, Sept. 4. Five-nation arbitration tribunal will launch a fresh bid here tomorrow to settle a three-yearold dispute between Britain and Saudi Arabia over a desert oasis.

Britain is not directly interested in the oasis, called Buraimi, and believed to be rich in oil. But she is backing two desert states against a challenge for possession by neighbouring Saudi Arabia.

The two states—the sultanateof Muscat and Oman and the Sheikhdom of Abu Dhabi—share the eight villages comprising the oasis between them.

Trouble flared up in the ill-defined border area in 1952 when a Snudi Arabian force moved into the oasis. It clashed with British-led local levies before withdrawing under a "truce" signed in July last year.

Britain will formally accuse Saudi Arabia before the tribunal tomorrow of violating this truce, which also provided for arbitration to settle the border

Aust. Government Has Wrong Outlook Says Dr Evatt

Sydney, Sept. 4. Australia's Federal Opposition leader, Dr Herbert Evatt, said today that the Australian Government's outlook on foreign affairs was "out of step" with the rest of the world.

Dr Evatt was commenting on the proposed approach by Australia to the International Monetary Fund for a dollar loan.

Australians, he said, should not be atraid to plan their economy for peace. The present international situation permitted and indeed required a substantial reduction in defence spending.

THE GIRL and THE HAT

XPERTS on dress and costume claim that changes in fashion are not fortuitous, but reflect truly the manners, morals and psychology of their period. A curious incident that once happened to me almost persuades me the experts are right.

I saw the girl for the first time at the Rond Point of the Champs Elysees. She walked with all the silken elegance of a pedigree saluki, the sort of Parisienne one expects to see in Paris and occasionally does.

But before describing her any further perhaps should explain how I came. to be sitting in a jeep in the centre of Paris on that beautiful August day in 1944.

On the 25th, the fighting men of the Wessex Division. had forced a crossing of the Seine at Vernon, and by the Amiens towards Brussels.

For five days

In one week they liberated at the whole of Flanders, and the inhabitants of that ancient battleground began to realise that for just this once they were to be spared the agonies of a protracted struggle. They signified their approval with no reticence whatever, and the Second Army benefited accordingly.

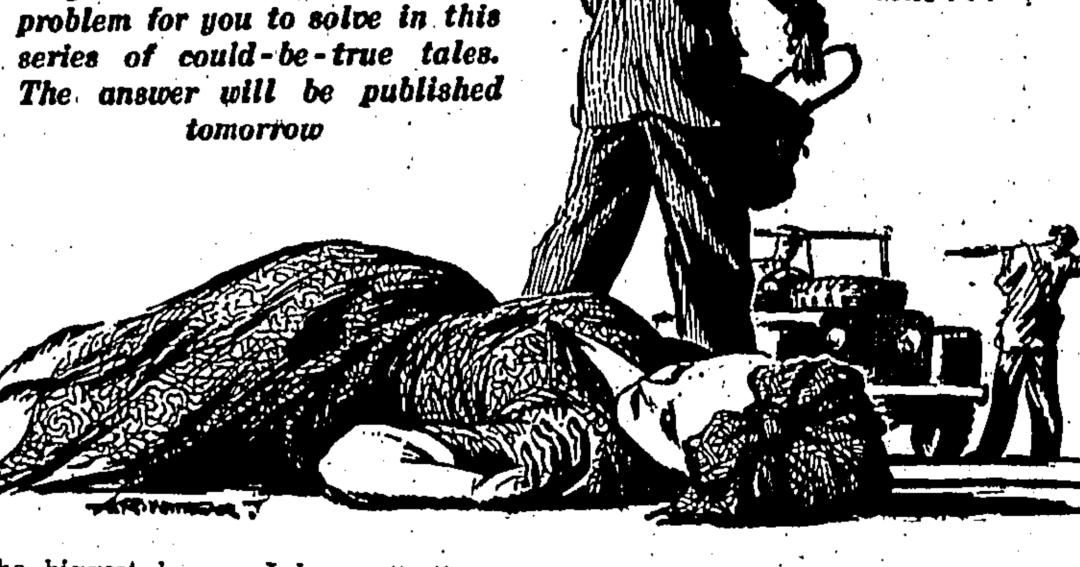

But the men of Wessex sat where they were and rested for five days, and for the headquarters and staff of a division, rest periods during a campaign are times of increased activity. This is as it should be, but among those strenuous days there was one that I managed to keep as a holiday. them like a question: "Partner, how many aces do you hold?" North would Fonly one ace, and South would have a problem.

She must have seen in my face that I would agree, because without another word she climbed into the jeep and not until we were moving did she say thank you.

When South took the trouble to make a cue bid in hearts, the enemy's suit, and then made the Blackwood bid of four no-trump, his question was very different: "Partner, how many aces do you hold outside of hearts?" If North had only the ace of hearts, he would have to respond five clubs, showing no ace. The actual tesponse of five diamonds showed one ace-outside of hearts.

Knowledge of this convention made it easy for the successful team to bid the grand slam. I was clear that North had the ace of spades and a sound opening bid. There was bound to be a fine play for the grand slam.

RINKS FINAL WILL CRAIGENGOWER TEAMS OPPOSED

Craigengower's giant-killers, Leo Silva, G. Santos, Robert Tay and P. K. Lau, did it again when they scalped another highly favoured four consisting of E. J. Liddell, T. Kavanagh, P. Hughes and J. Forest Hills, New York, Sept. 4.. Top seeded Tony Trabert joined the general advance of favourites to the third round of the U.S. Amateur Tennis Championships today with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Japanese Champion Atsushi Miyagi.

The 25-year-old Wimbledon Champion from Cincinnati, shooting for a net double expected to draw a $100,000 pro offer, rarely went to the net as he flattened his slender Japanese opponent. The Story of Lovely Sophia Loren. Part 1.

One of the world's most beautiful girls (but no man has ever been out with her alone!) she loses a contest and then gets her chance to join these lush ladles of the Screen who loathe the very sight of each other.

Volcano With The Honey-Coloured Eves By HENRY THODY

Sophia Loren is a girl who could easily, I do not hesitate to predict, land any man in the world. And in her gay, light-hearted way she loves to turn the power of her natural charms on men (taxi-drivers, cops, newspapermen like myself too) and see them become mice!

Yet Sophia is not married—not even engaged. Does not have a regular boy-friend, in fact.

No man has ever had a date with Sophia alone. Date her for dinner and she brings either Mama (still quite a girl), or sister Maria, 16, herself a startling beauty being groomed for stardom.

Sophia did not win. She came second. And herein lies a story. It was the "Princess of the Sea" contest; staged in Naples. The Lorens (or the Scicolone family, to give them their real name) lived in a small fishing town on the lovely Gulf of Naples.

Much of Saigon's galety and night life is due to the departure of a large part of the French Expeditionary and of thousands of French citizens who see no future in the country.

Yet, in spite of this exodus, this capital remains the Asian city in Asia—if there were no Victnamese about in the centre of the city, one might be in any small provincial town in Southern France.

When the French colonised Indo-China, they brought with them their culture, their architecture and their way of life. When they built Saigon, it was as if they said "if we cannot live in France, let us at least protend we are there."

They laid out the city with broad, tree-lined boulevards and dotted it with bars and cafes. They even built an opera house and an Hotel de Ville so that the Frenchman drinking his beer could sit back dream that he was France.

Mr Hunt said that problems in Australia were the considerations of distance, the unequal distribution of the population, and a lack of theatro buildings. The solution to these problems lay, at least in the early stages, in the formation of touring companies, "relying on the generous help of the commercial managements to house them outside Sydney." Eventually, some form of professional repertory company might be required which would be able to play permanently in each State.

Until Australia has developed "home-grown stars" it is likely that the Australian theatre for purely economic reasons, be forced to import overseas artists.

In a message to the people of Australia on the eve of the Elizabethan Thontre's opening night, Mr Hunt said: "Wa hope you will look to the Elizabethan Theatre for good entertainment, and the beginnings of a theatri-cal tradition of which Australia may be proud."-China Mail

From Ronald Boxall

London, Sept. 4. Chancellor Butler has called a special meeting of Commonwealth Finance Ministers. This will take place later this month in Istanbul when the Ministers gather for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

Whether it is a crisis or merely a troublesome period that Britain is now going through it is equally the concern of the other sterling area countries. For the two main symptoms in Britain are declining gold and dollar reserves and the deterioration of the United Kingdom balance of payments. From Our Economic Correspondent

London, Sept. 4.

London Stock Exchange is going through a period of acute uncertainty. The Prime Minister's speech over the weekend with its strong hint of further Government action to curb public spending convinced many people that the bank rate would be raised last Thursday. It wasn't, and uncertainty became deeper than ever.

The Stock Exchange is waiting to see where the disinflationary axe will fall next. Business has been at an abnormally low ebb and investors are not coming forward to take up the small amount of stock that is being sold.

Prices had already lost their | provious week's gains by Thursday, and August gold and dollar loss caused further substantial losses on Friday.

Statistically the story is full of gloom. The Financial Times index of Government securities has reached its lowest point since compilation in 1926. On Thursday, it stood at 87.98 compared with 89.54 at the previous week's close. He said that the facts as outlined by the Crown were clearly set out in the Judge's notes end briefly he said they were that first accused met a person by arrangement and came to an understanding about dealing in dangerous drugs. Later on, the first appellant having left the meeting place was seen to return to it with the second appellant and holding a suitcase. Mr Justice A. D. Scholes at the Criminal Sessions this morning' ruled that evidence of the feelings and beliefs of a Prosecution witness in a rape trial was not admissible and was irrelevant.

His Lordship gave his decision after hearing legal submissions from Counsel on both sides in the absence of the Jury, who had been told to leave temporarily.

On their return, Mr Justice Scholes directed them accordingly on this point. He recalled that at Friday's hearing, the witness concerned had said he felt "displeased" about a certain matter.

Sir,-Feeling sure that you will kindly find space in your columns for the following few remarks, I beg to offer them for publication: and coming from a humble individual, I am confident they will prove to be the universal sentiments of shipowners and shipmasters in this colony.

The great grievances of which I would speak (for such they really are), are the rulnous system allowed to be carried on in the manner of shipping crews, and the farce which thu law terms "punishment" for any breach of duty on board ship,—I say allowed to be carried on for surely much might be done that is left undone by the proper authorities to advance the shipping interest of the colony.

In instance of the latter point; a crew cannot be obtained, even for a coasting voyage, without three months, advance down on the rail, and wages at a most exorbitant rate have to be paid for the greatest trash in the shape of seamen that ever put foot on board ship. After signing articles, they come on board, knowing they cannot do the duty they have agreed to do and been paid for; and then can afford to laugh at us, being well aware that our government will not assist us. The Testifying, Bdr Frederick colonist authorities, if they really had the interest of the colony at heart, might, I think, state of affairs.

SHOULD BE FLOGGED

If a scaman neglects or refuses work, or commits any other breach of duty, imprisonment is the only punishment and thereby the ship is deprived of a man's labour; and I venture to assert, that eight out of ten of those we ship here, would much rather spend their time in fail than do their duty on board ship. Men who take such advantage of their employers, should be well flogged, I think; or if you have such a thing as a treadmill, it might be here turned to some advantage.

I beg to add, in conclusion, that I write from some little experience in these matters; but well knowing that an anonymous epistle, such as this, alone is of no avail, I offer these few remarks to induce some more able The Family Planning As- For picking up cigarette ends penman, or some influential sociation of Hongkong announces off a street Weng Chiu, 49, was drm, to take up the subject.—I

A SHIPMASTER SIUP'S PROVISIONS

The Gazette of last Saturday, contained, a Proclamation annuiling former Proclamation of February 28, 1855, respecting Provisions and Medicines of Chinese Passenger Ships, and specifying the scales on which they are to be supplied in future. On examining the lists however, embracing, under Provisions, six, under Medicales, forty-four, and under Surgical implements, sixteen, items, the only difference we can discover is, in allowing 14 instead of 341b. of Balted Vegetables or Pickles per diem; but whether for each passenger or for the whole ship-load, is not specified. The main purpose of the Proclamation would seem to be to take away certain discretionary powers by which the Emigration Officer might substitute equivalents in the scale of Provisions, and make such alteration in the Medicines and Surgical implements, as, upon the certificate of a medical practitioner, he might consider sufficient; and looking at the quantities of media cines and implements set down in the scale for each 100 Chinese passengers, we have no doubt that "a duly qualified medical practitioner," unless he had the supplying of the articles himself, would certify they
